

Highlights:

- The relationship between the diode ideality factor and the iron concentration in the base layer of silicon $n^+ - p$ solar cells has been studied through computer simulation
- The algorithms of an iron concentration evaluation in a silicon solar cell by using a current–voltage curve have been proposed
- The analytic expressions have been suggested and the calibration curves have been are calculated